Ringing bells. Hurried footsteps. Dropped pencil. Tick tick tick . . . time ticking away. Jammed locker. Books falling.
Slamming locker. Hurried footsteps. Another dropped pencil.
Ringing bells. Closing doors. Nervous glances. Quick seat.
Rushed excuses. Detention. What? Pens clicking. People talking. Teacher yelling. Silence. Brave soul. Talking again.
Detention. Ringing bells. Repeat seven times daily.

School. Love it or loathe it, it is here. Inside these walls is where you choose your future. Whether you choose to be another brick in the wall or shine like a star, the decision rests with you. As they say, "You are what you make of yourself."

Slammed lockers. Shouts of joy. Faces full of gloom.
Long hugs. Numbers exchanged. One more look. Outside.
Groups of people. Huddled. Laughing. Crying. More hugs & exchanged numbers. "Don't forget me." School is out. Every

ACADEMICS

"Inside" the Numbers & "Outside" the Classroom

Right: Crystal Simpson is glad to get some help with her difficult math assignment from Mr. Townsend. Below: Breann Stephens and Brad (Bradonna) Bradford measure something scientific.

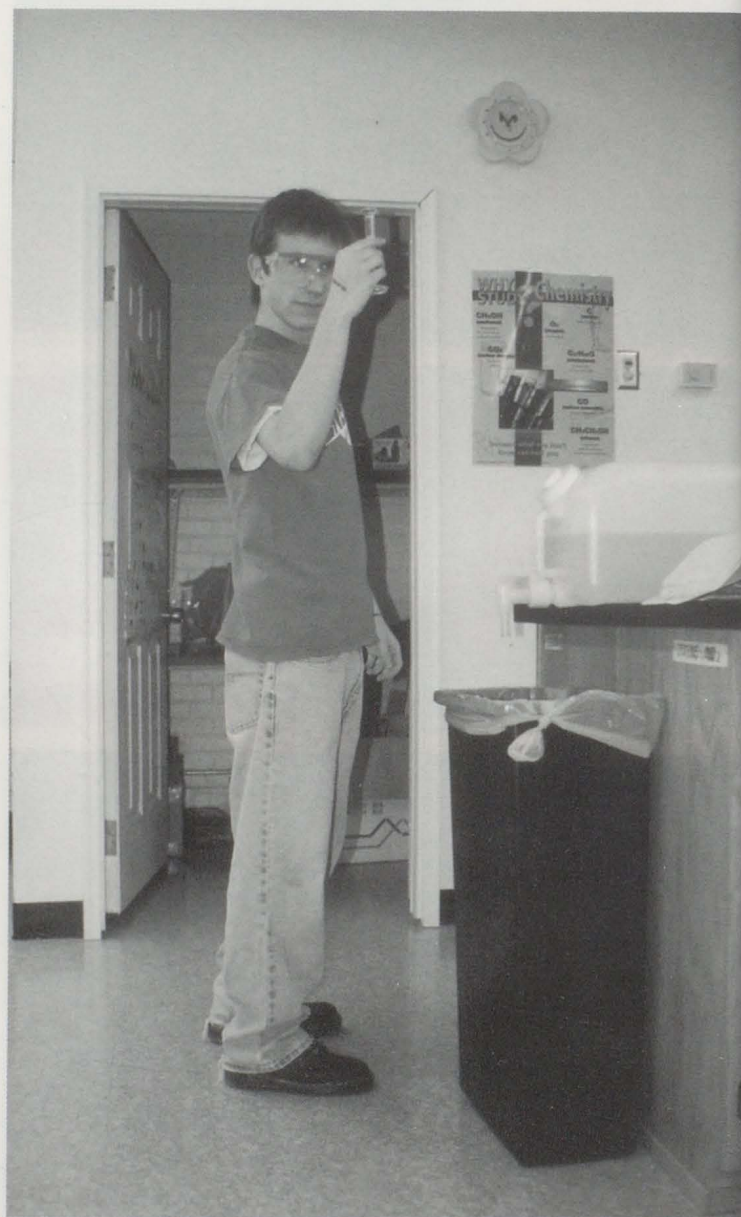

From investigating a monkey crime scene to participating in science day competitions, the Seneca High School Science Department has fulfilled its creed: hands-on learning is essential. Mr. Commons' Biology classes, as well as the new science research class, competed in several regional competitions this year. Mr. Commons also took over the AP Biology classes, incorporating experiments like the electrophoresis of DNA. Newcomer Chris Yust was hard at work his first year teaching three different levels of science classes including physics. He stated: "Seneca schools have given so much to me, and I am excited to be able to give a little bit back." Mrs. Sample has enjoyed teaching the new science research class--especially in her brand new classroom. The room, located adjacent to Mr. King's room, has worked well for her. "I just love it," she said.

"Math is fun!" This is actually one of the many positive values enforced in Seneca's Math Department. Coach King inspires his students with math football, basketball, baseball, and golf. "I do whatever I can to make math fun," he stated. Coach Townsend added a new twist to his applied math and Algebra I classes by implementing computer spreadsheets to compare equations. Mrs. Snider's notorious linear programs surfaced again, but Kassi Slaughter said her projects enhance her learning experience. She stated, "Mrs. Snider helps me learn math by incorporating fun projects into the lesson." No matter how challenging math seems, the teachers at Seneca High School never cease to make learning it more tolerable.

Jennifer (Rick James) Eilenstein

Students always know Caleb Gallemore is coming down the hall even before they see him. This is probably due to the uncanny ability he possesses to make himself heard, loud and clear, which is a requirement of being in the Seneca High School Speech and Debate department. From performing under the dazzling stage lights of the Seneca High School stage to breaking into the finals in C-X debate, members of the Speech/Debate and Drama department showed Southwest Missouri how it's done this year, and that quality, not quantity, is what counts. "After my second year here at Seneca," Coach Taylor explained, "this program is showing some definite potential. We're not quite as large as we'd like to be, but we have some good talent." Indeed, every day inside the walls of Seneca High, we brush shoulders with national finalists, state qualifiers, and district champs without even knowing it. Mr. Taylor and Ms. Balsman work with future Broadway show girls and Hollywood actors every day to ensure their futures on stage. Just remember, the next time you hear a loud voice booming down the hall, it's only Caleb Gallemore practicing for his future inauguration speech as the President of the United Nations.

Walking out from the main high school building and over to the shop room, a student might feel as if he/she was entering an entirely new world--a man's world! Well, like the FACS classes, shop isn't just a class for one sex. In fact, Mr. Yust said, "I'd like to see more girls take this class." Over the years, the percentage of girls taking the shop classes has increased dramatically, and Mr. Yust said that most of the girls can do just as well or even better than the boys.

"I never thought working with wood could be so much fun," claimed Cristi Graham. "But it's not just fun and games with Mr. Yust. Not only do we build wood projects, but we also have to make mind-boggling safety posters and draw up the dimensions of our projects beforehand." Watch out guys, the women are moving up in the world of wood!

Call Ms. Hill's classes "Home-Ec" and she'll beat you with a spatula; refer to them as "girl" classes and she'll shove a roll of wallpaper...well, just know that Ms. Hill's Family and Consumer Science classes are much more than just the general "Home-Ec" classes one might be familiar with.

According to SHS's own Martha Stewart (Ms. Hill), the FACS classes teach students many skills that they will need in everyday life. And, according to Ms. Hill, these classes aren't just for the girls--boys need the experience of being barefoot and pregnant in the kitchen as well. From cooking delicious desserts to interior decorating, the FACS classes are full of excitement. "Believe it, and you can achieve it," is Ms. Hill's motto.

Middle: German students put the finishing touches on their Pfefferkuchen Hauses. Below: Katherine Rankin tries to help Heath Sitton with his Spanish assignment, "Glue is s-t-i-c-k-y Heath."

Communication Arts isn't just about spelling, word usage, and punctuation, it's also about plays, poetry, and important writing and speaking skills. These skills will set Seneca High School students above the rest and will allow them to step into the real world with confidence. Through these classes, teachers use poetry and literature to expand and shape the minds of their students, helping to form well-educated individuals. Here at Seneca, teachers come up with new and creative ways to present their daily lessons. Whether it's Ms. Cesari's freshman class participating in the "Trust Walk" around the school, or Mr. Page's AP English class reenacting the sword fights of Hamlet, teachers always make their class work fun and interesting. Senior Joe Williams described his AP class as "fun and exciting." He said, "Even though it's a lot of work sometimes, I think it will all be worth it in the end and help me get ready for college." By learning these valuable lessons, students are likely to go a long way in life.

Bottom Right: Dana McNett has mastered the international language of baking.

Tu hablas Ingles? Nein, gibt mir Bon Bons! Do you know what this means? Probably not if you didn't take Spanish or German. Our foreign language teachers work hard every day to help students open their minds and accept the fact that people of different cultures do and say things a little differently. Ask either one of the teachers, and they would definitely agree that this is not always an easy task! However, after a little time and patience, the students have started picking up the language. Ms. Guthrie proved this point by saying, "I am very pleased with how well my students are catching on...even Ryan and Garon!" Watch out, because before long, this school is going to be full of bilingual students!

Below: Mr. Rogers interprets American History for a German exchange student. Right: Jessica Craven concentrates on her government assignment. Below Right: While dominating his annual Monopoly tournament, Coach Whitehead teaches some valuable economic lessons. Bottom: Sarah Marrs utilizes her resources in economics class.

Mrs. Lawson's business classes have come a long way with technology these last few years. With many more devices to help convey the teachings of business, students can better learn about money and marketing. "This has been a fantastic year so far with all our new gadgets," stated Mrs. Lawson. With the purchase of new equipment as the result of a marketing/co-op grant, the school is keeping up with the times, so students are ready for the "real world."

Mrs. Lawson isn't the only teacher bragging on technological advances throughout the school. Mrs. Eppard's computer classes have updated and upgraded their computers and software programs. Her hopes are for the computer students in the web-design classes to be given the privilege of using their new software to help design and operate the Seneca R-7 School District's Web-Site within the upcoming months. The addition of a new "dirty-site-seeker" tracking program will assist teachers to find students who choose to visit inappropriate sites at school.

If students in social studies classes learned nothing else this school year, they have certainly learned what it is like to take part in living history. One can hardly discuss this past year's social events without bringing up the tragedies of September 11th. "This has been a truly amazing year. With the events in the world, students have a real sense of living history," stated Mr. Whitehead in regard to his students' learning experiences this year. From learning about a student's background with the research of family crests and names in Mr. Rogers' World History class, to writing one's own obituary in Mrs. Roberts' Psychology class, the ever-insightful area of social studies continues to broaden the minds of the youth.

The Living Legend J. B. Kelly

The pressroom is in chaos as usual; the slave driver relishes his whip with the bitter sting of regret and sorrow. How are the publications members supposed to meet these ridiculous deadlines and standards set by the tyrant Mr. Page? "He doesn't even use names anymore, just boy and slave." --J. B. Kelly.

Even with extracurricular activities, the geniuses of the Warrior staff somehow master beautifully-written stories and thought-provoking photographs. We are in deep gratitude to these heroes, and we are in sheer awe of these great warriors of the year-book battlefield. Thank you publications staff (journalism gods?).

WHERE ART THOU?

In how many classes is expression a requirement? It seems quite impossible to fully express yourself in the core subject classrooms; yet, in Mrs. Yust's room, expression takes the driver's seat and puts form and regulation in the trunk. From Art I to pottery and ceramics, kids are producing "ART" from mere paper and clay. "Laugh, Love, and Live without regret," --Mrs. Yust. Which reminds us that true life skills are not always in the books that we are forced to read, but in the lessons we wish to learn. Ryan Cook

"I would teach children music, physics, and philosophy; but most importantly music, for in the patterns of music and all the arts are the keys of learning."--Plato

The Seneca High School Band soared far beyond normalcy this year, both on the stage and on the field. The Marching Indians delivered one of the most emotional performances of the season at the Maple Leaf Band Festival where the band took 5th and the color guard won Best Auxiliary in their division. For their final field performance at home, the Tribe painted their hair green for special effect.

Many fond memories were made this year as senior drum major Jerusha Hughes explains, "Through all the years in high school, band has given me the best memories. Some are memories of being drum major, taking trips, playing in concerts, and just spending time with friends."

In concert season, 18 students qualified for the District Honor Band, and 16 musicians qualified for State Band Auditions. Sophomore Rachel McGriff shares her band experience, "In the weeks leading up to State Band Auditions, your time is consumed with hours upon hours of practicing. But even if you don't make it, it's still a great honor to be among Missouri's finest musicians." Mrs. Durbin, head band director, was very proud of all eight students who auditioned, and she was especially pleased with Dyana Bard who landed 10th chair clarinet.

No one ever said that choir was an "easy-A" subject, and the blood, sweat, and tears shed by the choir while attempting to accomplish all of their goals was pure proof that choir isn't just a blow-off class. "The concert choir started out pretty rough this year, but with a lot of hard work and determination, we came out great," sang Brooke Granger. This year the concert choir was invited to perform with the Russian ballet The Nutcracker. "That was an awesome opportunity and a once-in-a-lifetime contingency," said Jennifer Eilenstein in regard to the concert choir's performance opportunity. After their successful gig at the ballet, the choir had to get down to work. The choir went through much work and preparation for the once-a-year NEO festival, and the concert and chamber choirs both came out with a I rating--the highest on the scale. Sounds like all the hard work did pay off!

A more colorful and energetic side of the choir classes at Seneca, the show choir, not only sings songs, but dances to them as well. Their theme for this year's main show was "The Army," and as if they were at a real boot camp, many of their performances were tough to accomplish. Often times, the show choir would never know their choreography until a week before the big shows. Still, making it through their practices and rehearsals, their hard work paid off as well and could be seen clearly through the applause of their audience. "Although this was a young group, we've done a great job, and have had a lot of fun," said senior song-and-dance specialist Nicole Shields.

Whew...ah...this is tough...running along with the freshman boys' P. E. class. Whoa! I think I'm going to stop now...whew...just let me catch my breath...ok now, where was I? Oh yeah, the P. E. and health story! Well, let me tell you, it's been quite an exciting year for both classes.

In P. E. many students have not only discovered that they actually had some athletic ability, but they've also seen it put to use for a grade. It may seem like an "easy A" class, but believe me, it is anything but that. In fact, most students struggle just to pass the class. Running, jumping, stretching, throwing, catching, playing badminton -- no one said this class would be easy, and according to senior lifesports student Keaton Taylor, "It's like pie. It goes by pretty quickly!"

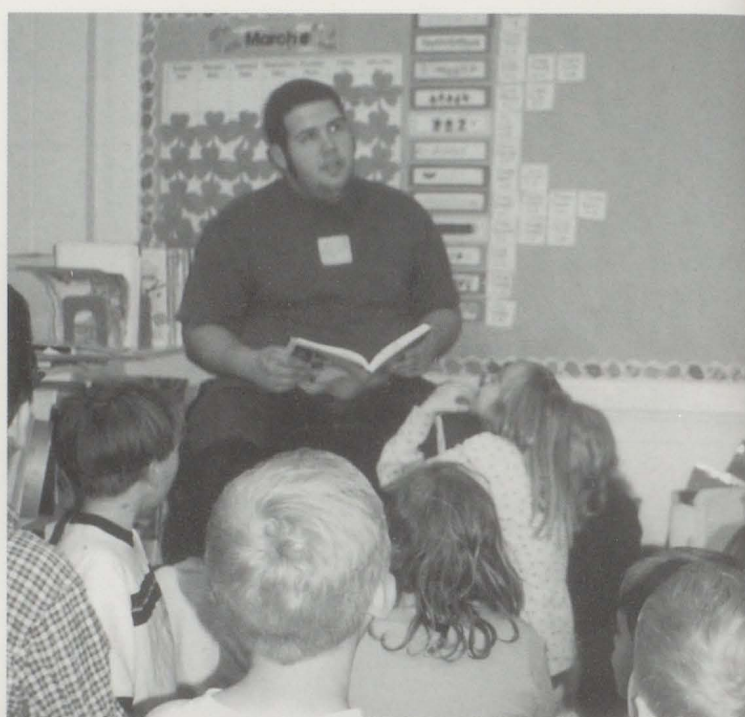

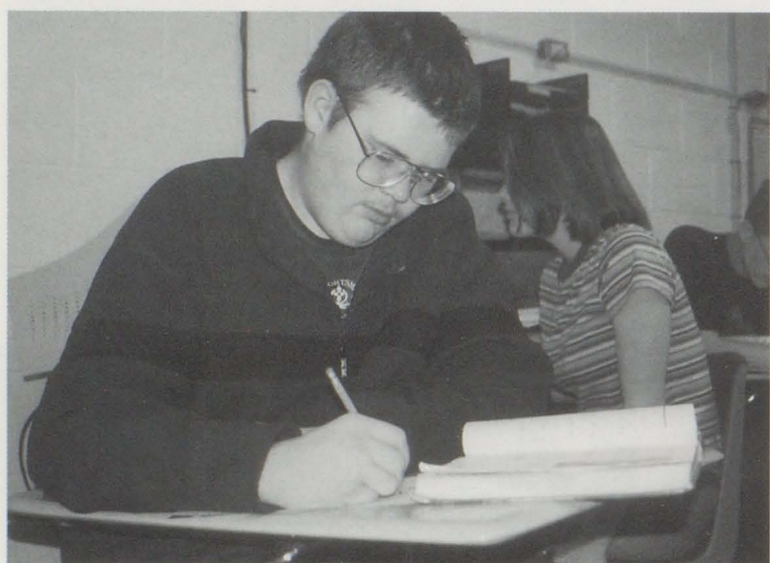

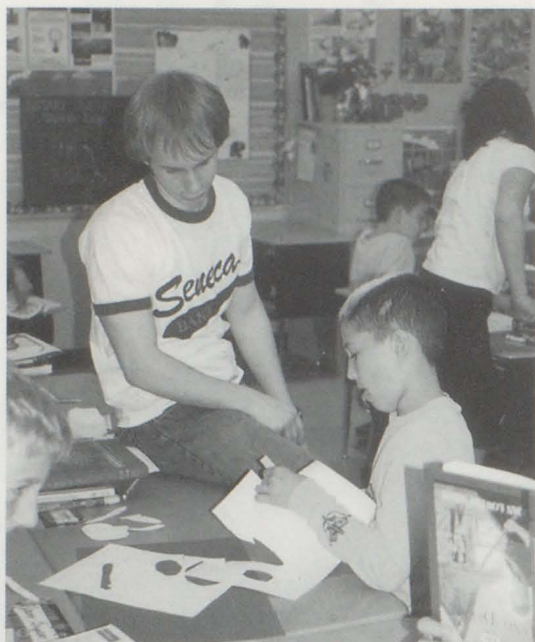

Health class has proven to be a very valuable course for many students. Not only do students learn how to keep their bodies healthy by refraining from harmful substances like ding-dongs and alcohol, they also learn more about the miracle of life. Now the students can understand why babies don't actually come from some bird. "The information that is taught in this class is as important as any other class out there," claimed health teacher Ms. Hill. No further questions asked.

Famous Amos Meredith

"Teachers open the door, but you must enter by yourself." -- Chinese Proverb. Educators in the Special Services Department, like Mrs. DePriest and Mr. Jones, provide the students with the chance to enhance their knowledge, but make the individuals realize that they must grasp the things being taught in order to make a difference in their lives. Curriculum projects, like career management, teach students the necessary skills for interview etiquette, job application, and job training. Students enjoy Mr. Jones' class because its environment eases the stress of meeting deadlines and taking tests. "I try to give the kids a break from just pencil and paper work, and to make education more interesting. Each student has his/her own style of learning, and I provide the chance to build both knowledge and study skills," he shared.

Do you want to go to college but don't think you can afford it? Mrs. Shadwick has a solution that will pay your way through your first two years. The A+ Program pays your tuition at any public 2-year college, provided you have 95% attendance and a 3.5 GPA, and have performed 50 hours of tutoring through the Cadet Teaching program. "It's a good choice for those students who can't afford the cost of tuition right away," explained Mrs. Shadwick.

The A+ Program isn't the only service Seneca offers to help students get on their feet. The alternative school provides a haven for students struggling with academic and social problems. A program called Promise Fellows offers the students with the chance to talk openly about the issues in their lives, and it allows mentors like Jo Sitton the opportunity to provide counseling to the troubled teens. "We as mentors do a lot of counseling and tutoring to help the kids get back on their feet," she said. Jennifer

Inside the walls of the Seneca Vocational Agriculture building, there have been many changes in the last year. Besides going through three teachers, two new glass doors, and a brand-new fence, the Vo-Ag department has only grown stronger. With a new teacher fresh off the farm, the students seem to be having a cow. In the words of Chelsea Higginbotham, "This year is going really good. Besides all of the changes here lately, I'm loving it." From the school farm to the depths of the welding room, the Vo-Ag department has pushed its way through another year of hard work and fun times. According to Curtis Maxwell, the best part of the year has been, "Learning about all the different types of plants, and their uses for the environment." Whether studying plants or animals, the vocational agriculture department has planted the seeds of knowledge.

After yet another summer of on-the-edge-of your well-cushioned seat suspense and uneasy, feverish speculation, the 2002 Warrior King and Queen are finally revealed to the masses. The dynamic duo of Ryan (I know spelling) Hopper and Jennifer (Where's Bo?) Eilenstein are this year's royal couple. It appears that all of their flirtation (on the Internet and "inside" the walls of SHS) paid off for the two seniors. When asked to comment on this year's most closely guarded secret, Mr. Page simply handed us this puzzling, cryptic haiku:

His razor is dull
Gets mad when computer stalls
Standing 5'6 tall

Perhaps the meaning of the universe is contained within these carefully selected 17 syllables--then again, it's probably just about Robyn's little brother.

At the beginning of the season there was nothing but optimism and cheerful thoughts about the upcoming girls' volleyball campaign. Carrie Routledge, the team's only senior, shared these insightful words at the beginning of the season, "Our year is looking very promising. I feel we will go far and win most of the games we have left, as well as place high at districts."

The ladies of the Seneca Volleyball Team fought gallantly in their efforts to turn out a hard-earned record with close losses and hard-fought battles. The assistant mastermind of the team, Mrs. Turner, showcased her infinite volleyball lore with this reflective statement about her team's chances, "I am the assistant coach, that's Mrs. Fox's deal." The varsity team finished with a record of 13 wins, 17 losses, & 2 ties.

The season was filled with exciting moments and colorful thoughts. One devoted fan, Ryan M. Hopper, thought that the girls' volleyball team was, "Fun to watch, and they will have a lot of potential for the upcoming seasons." Another crazed fan, who goes under the alias of Joseph Williams, pondered in absurd wisdom, "We have a volleyball team?" Well, obviously we do have a volleyball team, who had a strong showing in conference play and was a well-respected force in the Southwest Missouri female sports scene.

And bringing out last year's Mr. Volleyball, Ben Eitemiller, is junior T. J. Durman. And this year's 2001 Mr. Volleyball is. . . Dale Hunter!"

T. J. presented Dale with his crown and the gifts from the varsity volleyball team. Nicole Shields started the game with the singing of the national anthem.

Although the team ended up losing, the girls played very well and their hardest.

After the game, it was back outside into the rain with one thing on everyone's mind: "The girls played one heck of a game!!"

Each year the Lady Indian Softball Team sets goals for itself, and many of the players set personal goals during the season. Although not all of these goals were achieved, many of them were. Overall, the team had a good season, ending the year with a third place finish in the conference and losing by one run in the district tournament. Even though the Indians ended up with the same record as the year before, ask any coach on the schedule and they would say that Seneca was definitely more competitive than they have been in a long time. "The team worked hard during the summer, and we saw a lot of improvement," said Coach Onstot.

When asked about her thoughts on the season, Mallory Jones stated, "We didn't end up with the record we had hoped for, but we played together and improved on a different area each game. It's only going to get better next year!" With that proudly proclaimed, the softball team has a good future to look forward to.

"Run, Tashina, run!" The SHS 2001 Cross-Country team once again celebrated an awesome year. The highlight of the season was when freshman runner Tashina Mailes blew everyone away with a 13th place finish at Districts that qualified her for State! At the State Championships in Jefferson City, Tashina placed 74th out of more than 160 runners--quite the grand accomplishment!

Senior runner Ryan Green spoke very highly of the team's efforts and accomplishments, sharing many wonderful spiritual thoughts on the season. "As a senior, I felt that we had a great team," Green said. "The chemistry with these runners was better than any other team I have been a part of. We have a lot of young talent, and I think they will go on to do very well in the upcoming years--especially Tashina. Everybody had a good attitude and got along with each other, and that, along with good chemistry, helps each person to feel good and perform better--as was true with this team."

Congratulations to our Cross-Country Team for another successful 'run'!

Golf, the sport that requires athletic skill, patience, and smart play, is now making its way across and into the hearts of the women at Seneca High School. That's right, the epitome of all extreme sports is now officially part of the Seneca female sports arsenal.

This year was a great year, especially considering the fact that it was an inaugural season. The girls placed 2nd at districts and had a strong showing at the state tournament in Springfield.

In the early part of the season, Coach Kendall Hunt stated, "If we can have some success early, it may generate some more interest." Katherine Rankin agreed with Coach and also said, "After going to state, I believe there will be more interest, and I'm looking forward to next year." Well, it seems that girls' golf will keep growing and surprise a few people in the upcoming years. Congratulations, ladies, on a great first year!

The sun didn't exactly shine for the Seneca Indians football squad this year, but a good attitude and lack of shame gave the town and schools something to be proud of. Commented Head Coach Chance Wistrom, "This team has nothing to be ashamed of; they fought hard and played to the best of their ability." The Indians started off the season with a well-fought game at the home of the McDonald County Mustangs, which resulted in a 15-14 victory for the Indians. From there, the team rode the roller coaster of an average season and struggled with defeats against teams such as Mt. Vernon and Webb City. "We had a very competitive schedule," said Coach Wistrom, "and unfortunately some games didn't turn out the way we wanted them to."

The football team was hindered this season because of a deficiency in the number of senior players. "Because there were only six, I know this was a difficult season for our seniors," quoted Wistrom. "I appreciate their hard work and dedication and wish they would have had the opportunity to realize more of their goals."

The team achieved a decent record of 4-6 for the 2001 season and has high aspirations for next year. Go Big Red!

Homecoming... Something a Little Different

This year, Homecoming was anything but normal. From the parade, to the pep rally, to the ceremony...everything seemed different. The candidates this year were senior Meleony Ames, junior Jessica Hinegardner, sophomore Shaye Onstot, and freshman Chelsey Hall.

The celebration started off with the usual "Spirit Week." Students came to school dressed as cowboys, twins, and pajama-wearing fools. When Friday rolled around, everyone knew that this year wasn't going to be like the others. First of all, the parade wasn't going down Main Street. Therefore, the traditional pep rally at the stoplight had to be changed. The rally was going to be held on the football field, but due to the rain, it was moved to the front parking lot of the school. It was "different," but all in all, everything turned out okay.

On Friday night, due to the weather, the candidates could not ride in cars during the ceremony. Instead, they were escorted out of the front of the stadium, where they stood awaiting their fate. Then came the big moment. . . junior Jessica Hinegardner was announced the 2001 Homecoming Queen. "I was very suprised when they said my name, and I didn't really know what to do," Jessica said as she thought back. When asked what was the one thing she remembered most about it all, Jessica said, (and I think all of the other candidates would agree), "It was freezing cold, and I just wanted to go inside!"

In the end, the Indians lost a hard-fought battle to East Newton by a score of 29-15. Freshman Chelsey Hall summed up the night by saying, "This year's Homecoming was different, but it was an event that I'll never forget."

From the beginning of the year the Lady Indians knew that things weren't going to be easy. The juniors knew they were going to have to step up and take on the role as team leaders after losing three seniors from the year before and having no returning seniors. When asked about the season, Mallory Jones said, "It was hard playing with no seniors. We had to really stick together and play as a team." That's exactly what the ladies did. The team finished the season with a record of 17-10 and beat two state ranked teams (Webb City and Cassville). They also placed third in the Carl Junction Tournament and the Washburn Tournament. Coach Arbeitman summed up the year by saying, "We depended a lot on each other and played as a team. I really feel like we built up a nucleus for next year and hopefully good things will happen." Congratulations on a good season ladies!!!

With constant opposing cheers of "Get a haircut!" and a relentless barrage of harassment, the Seneca fans helped the boys' basketball team have a great year. This year the team had a lot of expectations to live up to; there were high hopes of what the boys' basketball team could do this year. I would say they lived up to their expectations by winning the conference championship title for the third consecutive year. The Indians also became back-to-back district champions, and they even threw in a Carl Junction tournament championship just for kicks.

The Indians suffered losses of many key players, but still prevailed as they went on to sectionals (last 16 teams remaining). The sectional game against Nixa was a close game that came down to the wire. Everyone on the team was fired up from the excitement generated by Wade Miller and his dominating presence on the bench. The Indians went on a huge run to take a fairly large lead near the end of the game. But it was all in vain as the Indians, in foul trouble and disgust, lost the sectional championship game in overtime by two points.

Looking back on the season, Jason Mayberry recalled, "We had a great year; I will never forget it." I believe he speaks for all of us. Thanks for a great and memorable season.

Junior Pulls Upset

The crowning of this year's basketball homecoming queen was a dramatic event as countless cheers and tears were unleashed by the moms of this year's royalty. Every year it is an amazing event in which school spirit flows to its extremities. The tradition is that the senior class dominates, but this year a shocking upset was in play as the junior, Miss Morgan Kuhn (escorted by the ever so stunning and modest Ryan Cook), was crowned this year's basketball homecoming queen.

Jason Mayberry, plagued by the absence of love, gladly accepted the role of "presenter of the crown." When he was called into action, he fulfilled his valiant role to perfection. Afterwords he stated, "I like girls."

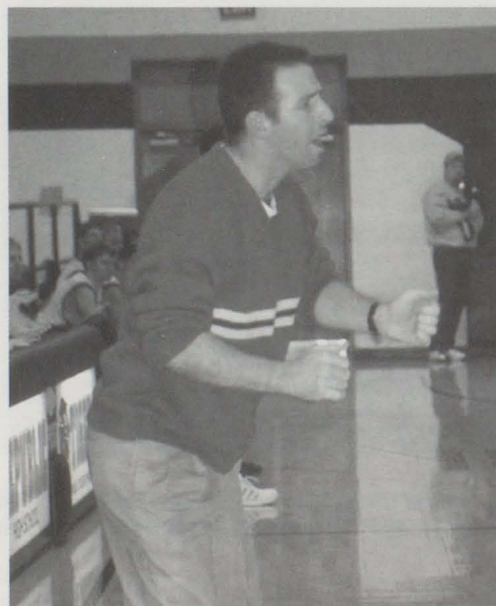

As all four candidates quoted for the Neosho Daily News, "It would be an honor to win," but what do these ladies have to say about not taking the title? Well, we know what Kelly Austin said, "It was still a lot of fun being nominated. 170!"

Is homecoming really that uplifting to the players? The answer may never be known, but to senior A-Train Aaron Albritton it doesn't really seem to have that major of an impact as he stated, "This is homecoming week?" It seems over the years that tradition, as well as everything else, changes with time. Sometimes for better, sometimes for worse. Seneca won the varsity basketball contest over the Monett Cubs.

The Seneca wrestling squad once again overcame all odds and displayed an excellent performance during its 2001-2002 season. Most of the wrestlers, on both the varsity and junior varsity squads, did very well and attained decent records of which no one was ashamed.

Were there any real downsides to the season? "When we're on the mat, the glare off of Coach Naden's head tended to be kind of distracting, but you got used to it after awhile," said one varsity wrestler in regards to the "downsides" query. In reality, several injuries were burdensome to the wrestling squad, including broken legs, shoulders going under the knife, and many bloody noses. Tragedy struck at the state competition when one varsity wrestler was injured and could not duel for a higher placing. Still, in spite of the broken bones and blood, the season flowed fairly smoothly.

Every member of the wrestling squad qualified for the sectional competitions, and six of the varsity wrestlers went on to the state duels in Columbia. Five of the "state" wrestlers ended up earning medals at those final duels. Even though the squad had no state champions this season, we know that they will always be champions in our hearts for doing as well as they've done.

Whitney Wins Wrestling Crown

Left: Once again, the 2002 Seneca Wrestling Homecoming queen candidates. Below: Kelly Austin displays her inventiveness, school spirit, and support for the wrestling team.

School spirit was flowing like wine through the halls of SHS during Wrestling Homecoming week. With crazy ties, wacky socks, and creative pins decorating the student body in colorful splendor, it was truly freaky!

Queen candidates Cristi Graham (freshman), Trisha Landreth (sophomore), Jessica Stansill (junior), and Whitney Young (senior) seemed quite excited about their honor of being chosen as royalty hopefuls. The cutthroat election of the queen was very close, but it was no real surprise that the victor was senior Whitney Young. It was clearly visible that Queen Whitney was nervous before and after her crowning, and she later commented, "I was shaking--couldn't you tell?!"

As for the actual dueling side of Wrestling Homecoming, the Seneca wrestlers laid their opponents down quite aggressively during most of their matches. Facing the Columbus and Grove teams, Seneca did moderately well. Seneca defeated Columbus in the first match, but barely lost to Grove in the second.

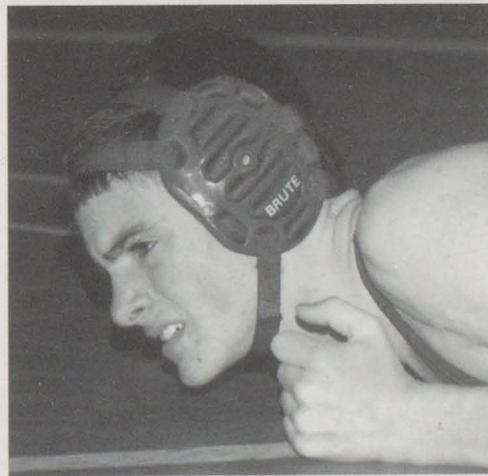

Between the Columbus and Grove matches, honors were recognized for senior wrestlers David Myers, Jason Kay, and senior wrestling cheerleader Lacey Alford. It was clearly visible by the raw emotion displayed by the crowd and a few salty tears shed by the seniors, that these kids will both be missed and will miss what they have done for Seneca wrestling.

All in all, the Wrestling Homecoming week was quite the "freaky" experience for the folks of SHS.

With amazing senior leadership the 2002 Seneca High School MEN'S Golf Team did well in District play. The team sent Jeremy Etris to State. Ryan "Sergio Garcia" Green had this to say about the team this year: "Although the team didn't live up to our individual and team goals this season, we were highly competitive in a tough district. We had five seniors that have been together since our freshman year, and all could have played the number one spot," (except Hopper). Jason "I'll hit the ball with my purse next time" Mayberry followed it up with this profound, yet puzzling, statement, "You should try my neighbor the accountant, probably a great golfer." Whatever Jason!

The team fared great in tournament play with many top five finishes, including the famed Waterbury Open. Guys, we commend you all on your fierce actions on the battle-grounds of golf. By Ryan Cook, not Hopper

Seneca High School's baseball team began their 2002 season on sound footing, or "off to a great start," as put by senior catcher Evan Scritchfield. With the wonderful leadership of "Scritch" and the outstanding "skillz" of many other players, the baseball team appeared to have great promise and potential for the 2002 season.

The pitching and hitting power of the team, Scott Elbert, proceeded to put much fear into the hearts of Seneca's opponents. In many games, the opposing pitcher would cower and send Scotty to first base without even throwing a pitch. Seneca's power players also included "Scritch," Jason "Tedward" Holt, and Cory Bishop. There is much promise for those younger guys in the years to come.

Senior team leader "Scritch" offered some awe-inspiring thoughts on this promising season. "Baseball is a game for those with intelligence and patience. Our team has shown flashes of both at times during the season. Hopefully, we can put it together for the big games." We're all hoping, and without a doubt, our hopes and prayers will be answered as the team 'steals' their way to glory.

The screams of agony. The cries of pain. The shouts of victory. The grunt of the last-ditch effort. These are just some of the sounds heard every day at track practice. A track member that wished to remain anonymous said, "Turner was a real slave driver this year." Her slave driver ways obviously worked. Jonathan Papp pulled a first place medal in shot, the girls 4x2 managed a top 6 finish, and the boys 4x2 placed 4th at conference.

This year's track team was riddled with a few injuries, including freshman Brendan Bailey and senior Joe Williams. The part of the track team that wasn't injured managed to stay on their feet...everyone except senior Kyle "Ankles" Evans. From running in a straight line to jumping hurdles, Kyle fell down "at least 17 times" according to Jerusha Hughes. "It was more like three," responded Kyle to the accusations. Whether running or falling, it was agreed by all that this year in track was something to remember.

A Day In The Life Of Seneca Cheerleader, Heather Chitwood:

We now take you to the Chitwood homestead. It is 5:15 AM. "Heather, you better get up. It's game day!!!!!"

"Oh my gosh! I'm, like, so late. I haven't even ironed my skirt, and I only have like two hours to put on my makeup. What will Dusty think!? I'm so nervous! I hope I can remember my cheers tonight because they are like way complicated. I better get a non-cheerleading friend to pay attention and take notes in class today because there is like no way I'm going to be able to concentrate with all of this pressure. I can't even remember what I'm supposed to wear today. I better call fellow cheerleader Ashley. Ashley, are you awake yet?"

"Oh my gosh, I've been awake for like four hours going over my cheers. I'm like so excited."

"Ashley, I like totally forgot what we are supposed to wear?"

"Our cheerleading uniforms...duh. Austin is going to love my uniform. Well, Heather, I've got to go spray my hair before it falls flat. See ya at school!"

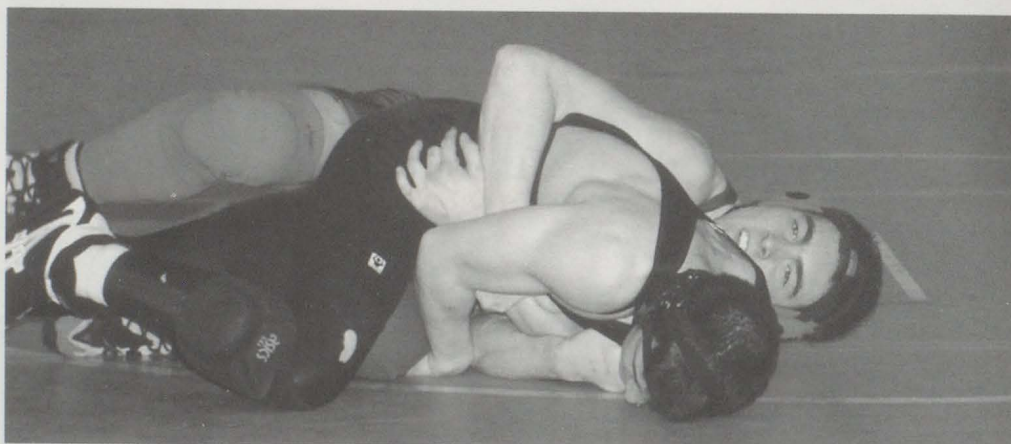

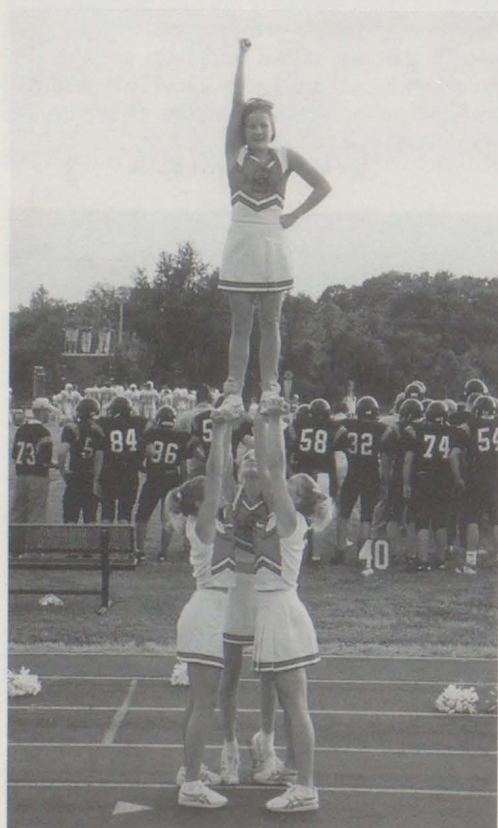

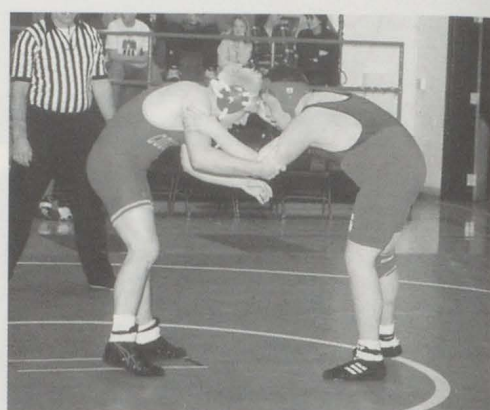

Cheerleaders are often stereotyped as being ditsy airheads. At Seneca, that is definitely not the case. No airheads here! The squads from every sport worked hard all year. The preparation began at the beginning of the summer when the football and competition squads got right to work. Team members practiced hard, attended camp, and then at the end of the summer the competition squad competed at regionals. They came home with a fifth place finish. Whether it was football, basketball, or wrestling, the cheerleaders always had a lot to do. Not only did they have to attend the games and cheer on the players, they also had to run the pep rallies and help prepare the homecoming events. Every squad did a great job of fulfilling their responsibilities. Keep up the good work girls!

As the final seconds of the 2002 school year tick away, one must sit back and wonder how the seniors got this far. This class is one of the most opinionated, religiously diverse, and all-around different groups of pupils to ever roam the halls "INSIDE THE WALLS" of SHS. Still, even though there are many variances amongst the members of the Class of '02, the seniors have stuck together through good times and bad, given one another a shoulder to cry on, and have provided the upcoming students something to strive for.

We have learned many things as seniors, including the fact that our sole purpose in life may be to serve as a warning to others. I know we're not perfect, nor do we strive to be...at least, most of us don't. Some of the seniors are true role models for the underclassmen, while others may simply be fine examples of what our parents hoped we would never become. Whatever the seniors are, one thing is certain, they will always stay a family of friends.

The first verse of the senior class song "With A Little Help From My Friends" states, "Lend me your ears, and I'll sing you a song --and I'll try not to sing out of key." I think these words can truly be applied to describe this senior class, as most of the students would do almost anything for one of his or her fellow seniors. Whether it be helping a friend finish his or her trigonometry homework or providing a ride home to one of those few seniors without cars, this class has shown they are loyal to one another and will always stick through it together.

When the seniors stand in line and prepare to walk across the stage at graduation, I know that the words of senior Tiffany Brady will certainly be going through everyone's mind, as the seniors look to the future, and simply think, "Don't fall!"

Your departed
senior chum

Jennifer Eilenstein:

"I learned that no matter where I am,
I always have to be myself.
It amazes me how people
"find" themselves in high school."

"Tripped Out On The 12th Year"

Screams of the bells beckon to come,
as the final days are put under the thumb.
Papers shuffled every day for a class,
hoping only to get through it and pass.
It seems like only yesterday we started here,
now like waking from a dream, it's senior year.
Never thought I'd see these days come so fast,
I just hope the memories will forever last.
Whether the days have been heaven or hell,
only the student themselves will be able to tell.
The times we all had were full of pain and joy, finding the perfect girl, or losing the first boy.
But through it all, the class still stands strong,
even though not everyone may get along.
There's a road behind us that wound and turned,
travelling on, we'll use the knowledge we've learned.
We say 'good-bye' to all the friends we came to know, hoping to meet again someday and say 'hello.'
The end for the seniors becomes quite near,
but we're reborn, tripped out on the 12th year.

The Public School Poet J. B. Kelly

HAUNTING HAIKU

by Patrick Meredith

Slowly walking tall
Watching everyone below
One year to King's Hall

Railroad engineer
Whatever they want to be Bioengineer?

Composed by Ryan Cook with Pat's help
(brilliant stuff like this takes two minds to cook up!)

Another illustrious year in the presence of school.

Later, hoping not to disappear,
education may be the best tool
in finding the right career.

Pushing for the end,
waiting for the past to clear.
One more river's bend,
one more day of fear;
I am a junior, I shall contend.

Freshmen

New people in a frenzied rush,
Inside the classroom falls a hush,
A brand new year befalls.

Friends, cliques, teachers, books,
Happy smiles, dirty looks,
All inside the walls.

Good days, bad days,
Excited "hellos", enthusiastic "heys",
All inside the walls.

Algebra, history, English essays,
Your hard work eventually pays,
Working inside the walls.

Freshmen rushing, talking, yelling,
About initiation, but no one's telling,
A secret inside the walls.

A brand new year, and it's going to be fun,
As a freshman, be glad when it's done,
All memories kept inside the walls.

Crystal Simpson

"The solitary bird has five requirements with one being that you sing softly. I am very proud of Seneca High School, and I do know that we 'sing softly'".

The five requirements of the solitary bird:

1. That you always point your beak upward.
2. That you always fly to the highest point.
3. That you not suffer for company, not even of your own kind.
4. That you have no definite color.
5. That you sing very softly.

Y 'all in the office (especially Sherri and Bonnie); without you we are lost
O rdinary Joes like you for gracing the pages of the annual U nabated efforts of Senor Page--he contributed to the effort or something

With another year gone, we begin to look forward to the future, to another year of school or work, or whatever fills the void of emptiness. Why not take a little time to look back and enjoy the memories, to bask in the afterglow? We only have these years for so long and then only the memories survive. Thanks for all the memories.

Ryan Cook

"This is a song about Susan, this is a song about the girl next door. This is a song about the everyday occurrences that make you feel like letting go, oh well, so much for the afterglow." --Art Alexakis

The 2002 Warrior was done good bye Me (Mr. Page) and them kids that stared at me while I did all the work. The Herff Jones Company produced the weighty tome you now hold in your hand. Say you actually read this to Mr. Page and get 14 cents off of next year's yearbook--it all adds up. Take advantage of this wonderful opportunity.

There can be only one...idiot. Happy couples,

P R O M 2002

Whew...it's finally over. Another year, another prom. Tuxedos, dresses, make-up, make-out, expensive dinners, limousines, music, lights, dancing, drinking punch--all the images imprinted in the minds of those who were brave enough to attend this beautiful disaster. The evening was April sixh, the time was 8 o'clock, and the place was Neosho's Municipal Auditorium.

As it has been for the past years, the Junior class of SHS was responsible for making the prom as good, or bad, as it could possibly be. The verdict on this year's prom: It was good. "I just hope I can go with my girlfriend in the future years, rather than her going with some older exchange student," commented freshman Corey Stinnett upon hearing about how great the prom was...from his girlfriend. Better luck next year, Corey.

The prom itself was scheduled to go from 8 o'clock in the evening until midnight, but most people left early to go change out of their good clothes into their bowling threads. SADD sponsored a two-hour bowling party after prom, and before the festive occasion was over, all of the lanes were nearly full with after-prom bowlers. It was a much-enjoyed night by all.

The elegant J. B. Kelly

"Aaron, did you see Canaan dancing earlier? What an idiot? There is always ONE." Just knowing that Bruce Fritchey and Dustin Fiebig are in the house is enough to make these girls smile.

"INSIDE"
the walls
"NEVERMORE"

After 12 long years, the members of the graduating class of 2002 find themselves "outside the walls" of Seneca High School not knowing where to go next. For these seniors, May 10th was the end of the way of life they'd always known. Anyone could tell by the looks on the graduates faces as they walked across the stage that for some of them it was an emotional time to say good-bye to the peers they grew up with. While for others graduation was an exciting time to take on the new responsibilities they will have to face in life. Each graduate will either venture away to college, get a job, or just stay home. Yet, no matter what dreams come true, these students will always remember the times, both good and bad, that they spent together in high school.

TEACHERS "ONCE YOUNG"

Yes, your teachers were once young. The Publications staff thought that you might enjoy having a look at your beloved educators before the deliberate, methodical hand of time took its weighty toll on their vulnerable flesh. Yes, after emerging from their solitude and seclusion from the ancient Egyptian Pyramids, these brave souls entered the teaching profession. Have a laugh or two! The following teachers participated: Mrs. Shadwick, Ms. Hill, Miss Balsman, Mr. Charles Yust, Mr. Mike Yust, Mrs. Morehead, Mrs. Mailes, Mrs. Yust, Mrs. Albritton, Mrs. Turner, Mrs. Snider, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Roberts, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Eidson, Mr. Naden, Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. DePriest, Mrs. Luther. Can you figure out who is who? Mr. Page

"KILLIN' TIME"

School is a big part of a student's daily life, but it is not all of a student's life. Practically every student has a hobby, a job, or even just an activity to "PASS" his or her time. These activities take talent, perseverance, and countless other qualities. This is a page dedicated to the time we as students and educators have to lose and what we do with the time we can never get back.

Time is constantly wearing us down, and we all wish we could better control it. Instead we spend a good portion of our lives sleeping or doing other mindless activities. Some people try to do productive things for the future, and others just waste the time away. From reading a book to sleeping the day away, we are all just "killin' time" in our own ways or is time "killin'" us?

From the infinite depths of knowledge of

"Makin' a Statement" at SHS

As we as students go through high school, a lot of us want to do something unique, something different, something people will remember us for. Some people do it through extracurricular activities, but some do unusual, crazy things. Whether it's hair, clothes, accessories, or whatever... these people are definitely "makin' a statement."

Seneca. Not only home of the Indians, but also home to some incredible BMXers, skate boarders, and rollerbladers. No rules. No competition. No points. No one yelling to get in line. No plays to memorize. Only freedom. Only creativity. Only on your own time. On these pages you will catch a glimpse of what makes up our lives outside these walls. Enjoy a few shots from the "S" games of Seneca High School.
Bike god Patrick Meredith

Men dressed as women--not the normal sight you see at a Monday night football game. Once again, the annual Powder Puff football game defied gender expectations. A game where the sex roles are reversed, and everyone is out for a good time. There were plenty of good times shared, but the best, and funniest was (and always is) the Powder Puff Queens. This year's ensemble of babes was: freshman, Derek Rhatigan; sophomore, Nathan Haase; junior, Cannan Vermillion; senior, Mike Savage.

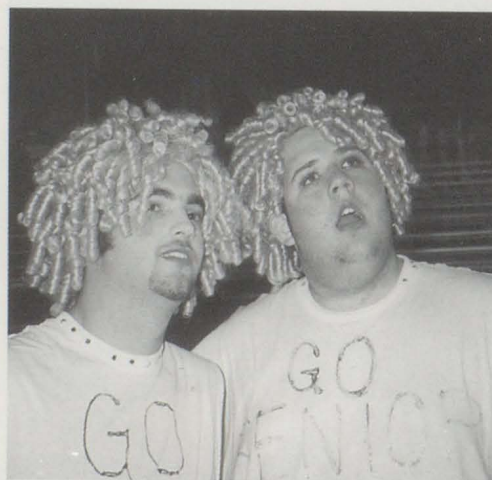

This year's Powder Puff title went to...Sophomore Nathan Haase. All he had to say about winning was, "Man, this sure is great!" Another highlight of the night was watching the curvations and pit hair of the senior cheerleaders. Not too active, but who needs to cheer when you look so good? The football game itself heated up pretty quickly. The senior girls clashed with the underclassed women. With a little more than clean football being played, the girls went bare head to bare head for a little taste of glory. Tiffany Brady talked about the dirty underhanded ways of the game and said, "It was nasty." The underclassed women took the win 6-3, ending this year's Powder Puff football game.

Oh Man, That's Nasty!

Left: The freshmen candidate, Derek Rhatigan, shows a little leg. Above Left: Everyman's fantasy! Above Right: Lindsey and Beth Barnes model the camaraderie that exemplifies what Powder Puff is all about.

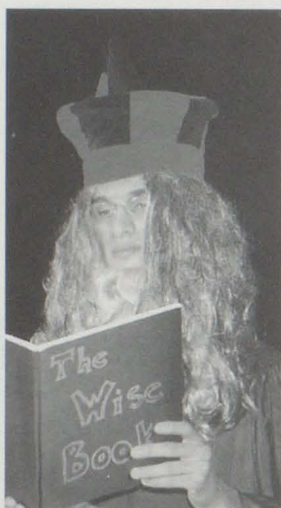

"Much love to me peeps!" Shaye Pep-O-Mint Onstot

"Bling! Bling!" Patrick Meredith

Brady Beckham performs a patriotic power stretch "OUTSIDE" the walls of SHS. Adam Eilenstein did not age gracefully during the school year--that 's OK Adam, the school year was rough on everyone. Seniors model the teamwork that helped them to win the school spirit grade competition. "These "WALLS" are getting to me Tara!"

I n the S W A L L S

The school year left freshmen Corey Stinnett in a daze. BLIND LOVE. Whether within or outside the walls, no one can deny J. B.'s fashion style.

"I couldn't think of anything to say," Chelsey Hall

"I feel like dancing!!!" Jennifer Eilenstein

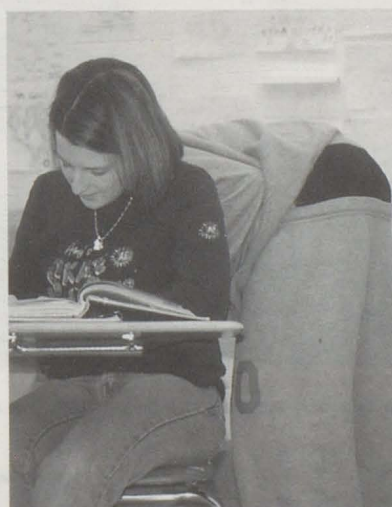

"Dig what I'm rappin' kickin' it back your turn?" Jeronamo Buzzsaw Kelly

"Like it matters" Ryan Cook

No comment Justin. Shaye Onstot is glad to put another year "BEHIND" her. The wagon is leavin' boys, and she ain't comin' back!

Inside the walls of Seneca High School, the aroma of tradition, pride, and class penetrates your senses. We seniors who walk down these halls for the last time are filled with the memories of our last four years of high school, while the rest of our fellow Indians are left to wonder what possibilities next year will hold. High school encompasses countless opportunities for everyone--successes and failures, joys and pains, hopes and disappointments. When we reflect on the past nine months, we see how our lives have changed as a result of all the things that have taken place. The events of September 11, the passing of a fellow student, the inevitable flowing of the infinite river of time, and the seeds of knowledge we've planted have impacted our lives and transformed us accordingly, like tiny acorns that become towering oak trees. Another year has passed, and we are all a year wiser and older. How will you use the knowledge you've gained? Do you see the open doors waiting for you? Do you embrace opportunity with open arms and an open mind? Inside the walls of Seneca High are many memories and innumerable possibilities. Look to your future, remember where you've been, and wonder where you will go. How did you spend your time "INSIDE THE WALLS"?

They say you've gone
To a far better place.
It would have to be....
Because YOU are there.
As this place was better
When YOU were here.

Thank you for showing us
How to live this life ... by Loving ourselves and others.
I can say without a doubt
You were the happiest
Person I've ever known

My eyes long to see you and
I realize....you're not gone.
You live in my thoughts,
My heart, my soul.
I can still feel you
Because love lives on.

You will be missed!
